Message from the Board Chair

Credit union friends,

Many years ago, I was auditing a few credit unions and banks while working for a CPA firm. I was so impressed with the credit union difference that I opened an account to transfer all of my funds from a national bank. I was later offered an opportunity to work for one of those clients. Well, the rest is history.

Like you, I feel privileged to work in this great movement delivering the kinds of financial solutions with the first purpose of helping our members thrive. Every day, we make a positive difference. During the uncertainty of the pandemic, credit unions were there to be the solution and help our members navigate a strange and sometimes fearful road. During those uncertain times, I was grateful for the help of our local and national associations. I often attended the meetings to decipher what actions to take to protect our employees while serving the membership that had so many needs and hardships. In the face of that uncertainty, we figured out how to deliver on the credit union promise of people helping people. We can be proud of those accomplishments.

I believe a significant factor in the success of Utah's credit unions over nearly 100 years has been our ability to work together to create, defend, and enhance the credit union operating environment. As you know, the road hasn't been easy, but I'm certain that the path forward will require us to link arms and charge ahead.

I'm grateful for you and your teams for staying engaged with our association and living this core cooperative principle.

I am confident that Utah's credit unions will shine in 2022 just as they have for decades. Thank you for the privilege to stand alongside you.

Sincerely,

Sterling Nielsen Utah Credit Union Association Board Chair

Message from the President

I don't mean to wax too nostalgic here, but I sincerely believe there remains great promise in the future for credit unions. Our history tells us so. It is that history that we must cling to. We need to remember the core "people helping people" philosophy that gave birth to this movement in this country 100 years ago.

Not only is this a movement of people helping people, but as we often see, it is credit unions helping credit unions. Sure, the landscape before us looks difficult. The road has been tough, and it will likely continue to be. I believe however, that the future of credit unions is made certain by its history. It is in adversity that credit unions were born, and it has continued to be in adversity when credit unions shine brightest.

The opportunity to tell the credit union story has never been greater. The chance to underscore the difference between what you do and what bankers do has never been greater. The chance to teach policy makers with such clear examples may never be repeated in our lifetimes.

Times are tough. The burden will be heavy but let's work together and get invigorated by the challenge before us.

President Reagan, thought to be quoting an ancient Jewish elder in his second inaugural address, asked the American people some tough questions with regard to the economy. He said, "If not us, who? If not now, when?"

You and your credit union are ideally suited to make the difference in the lives of your members. Now, more than ever before, your members need your service and support.

Scott Simpson President/CEO, Utah Credit Union Association

There was also an election for the open At-Large seat. Kerry Wahlen, Goldenwest Credit Union, was elected to the board.

Report of the President

Scott Simpson was brief in his presentation to the group. He thanked everyone for their hard work during this difficult time and stated that many people had mentioned how credit unions had gone above and beyond for their members. Proof of that was when Gov.
